The State Family Planning Administrators (SFPA) is a national organization for state level administrators of family planning programs. SFPA members are representatives of state and territorial health departments, and the District of Columbia. Most members are individuals who administrate the Title X federal family planning grants but some are from state health departments and are responsible for only state-funded programs. The Office of Population Affairs (OPA) funds the SFPA Project and it is managed through Center for Health Training, Seattle, Washington.

The mission of SFPA is to provide a forum for leaders of state/territorial family planning programs to exchange ideas and strategies that improve services, and to influence, support and promote policies that foster quality family planning as an essential component of health care for all.

Background

In 2002, State Family Planning Administrators (SFPA), a project funded by Office of Population Affairs (OPA) DHHS and administered through Center for Health Training, Seattle, Washington, did a needs assessment of all members to identify common areas of interest for assisting family planning (FP) programs in reaching out to culturally and ethnically diverse communities. From the information identified, it was decided to create a resource list, "STD/HIV Client Education Materials for Linguistically Diverse Populations." The goal was to collect names of various pamphlets, fact sheets, etc. and create a central list of non-English sexually transmitted disease/infection (STD) patient resources. To collect information for this list, SFPA Project staff solicited input from state FP administrators, some of their clinics, STD and HIV programs, and from publishing companies selling educational material. The internet was also searched. This list was then sent to twenty clinics in the country for feedback during the months of September-October 2003.

By no means does this list contain all of the non-English STD/HIV client resources that are available. It is an attempt to fill a void for those clinics that may have limited knowledge of the scope of resources available. Hopefully this list can be made accessible to large numbers of reproductive health professionals and STD/HIV programs that work with linguistically diverse populations

Important Considerations

1. All of the resources that are on the list were 1) sent from health professionals (usually family planning clinic personnel), 2) found through soliciting information from educational companies or 3) discovered when searching the internet. Resources collected were not screened by Project staff for content or accuracy but are believed to be in use by various clinics.
2. It is important that all brochures chosen for clinic use be approved by an established local information and educational standards (I & E) committee. For those committee members who cannot read the intended language, a translator may be needed to inform the committee about contents of the brochure.
3. A list, by its very nature, is time-dated which means that resources available one day may not exist the next day. Also, in reverse, new resources or added translations are being developed all of the time so when examining a source on this list, make sure to look closely to determine if further subjects or language versions are now available.

How to Use this Document

Find a specific pamphlet or fact sheet for a patient by conducting a search. Do this by using the search function on your computer (usually under the category of Edit—then Find or Search).

Search by Disease. (Let's assume that you are looking for a resource to use for a patient who has herpes and is able to read Spanish.) Under "Find", type in the name of a sexually transmitted infection; in this scenario it would be the word herpes. The cursor should jump to the first time "herpes" is used and you can scroll through the list of herpes resources to determine which ones are available in Spanish. Also, if one is using the PDF version of the list, find a disease by using the bookmarks.

-OR-

Search by Language. (Now you need brochures that could be made available to your Russian clients.) In this case, do a search for the word Russian. The "Find" function will go to first item on the list with your selected key word, Russian. Continue to push the find button until all resources written in Russian have been shown.

This list contains patient educational materials written in many languages. Not all disease-specific resources come in all of the languages but doing a search of the following 30 languages will lead the reader to those that were included in this document.

Amharic	Haitian Creole	Polish
Arabic	Hindi	Portuguese
Bosnian	Italian	Russian
Cambodian	Japanese	Serbian
Chinese	Khmer/Cambodian	Somali
Creole	Kiswahili	Spanish
Croatian	Korean	Tagalog
French	Lao	Thai
German	Macedonian	Turkish
Greek	Oromo	Vietnamese

Printing a Resource from Internet Access or Ordering the Information

Download a Resource from Online. When reading the list, note that one of the columns is labeled Language(s). In this box, there is information that states either “order” or “available online”. Some of the individual brochures or fact sheets, complete with full text, can be downloaded and printed. If it is available online, then click on the website in the last column marked “How to Order/View.” If you are connected to the internet, you will automatically be taken to that site. If printing the resource, there may be additional space added for your clinic’s information but please be respectful and give credit to those who developed the material. Printing specifications will vary depending on the printer and software being used.

Ordering Information. The last column will tell the reader where questions can be directed or how the resource can be ordered. Some of the resources have a note attached stating [Special Order Info—Endnote # 1-4]. This indicates that the reader should refer to the last page of the list where special ordering information exists for that resource.

No resources can be ordered from the SFPA Project.
